DEEP CLEAN
The Anacostia River revival in Washington, D.C.

HING HAY PARK
Turenscape with MIG

RICHARD HAY
Thaisa Way remembers

HOPE FOR THE
The search for borer
LAM

12 INSIDE

14 LAND MATTERS

FOREGROUND

20 NOW

Andropogon develops a soundscape model; a switchbacking staircase in Ottawa reaches down to the river; Oakland’s beloved Monster gets a makeover; and more.
EDITED BY TIMOTHY A. SCHULER

38 LIGHTING

Lighting from the Inside Out
With the rising popularity of outdoor living comes a shining new crop of luminaires.
BY ELIZABETH DONOFF

50 PLANTS

The Last Ash Standing
The emerald ash borer beetle isn’t too fond of boring into the blue ash. If scientists can find out why, they may be able to save more trees.
BY JEFF LINK

62 CONSTRUCTION

Timing Is Everything
Landscape installation should be driven by weather and nature, not financial models—but climate change is making best planting times unpredictable.
BY ANNETTE WILKUS, FASLA

72 GOODS

Play Harder
Even little kids can have big fun as they splash, climb, and even make music on these play structures.
"THE DISTRICT WAS BASICALLY HANDED THIS HOT MESS."

—JIM FOSTER, PRESIDENT, ANACOSTIA WATERSHED SOCIETY, P. 80

FEATURES

80 THE RIVER BENEATH THE RIVER

After decades of neglect, the Anacostia River—Washington, D.C.’s lesser-known waterway—is poised at the edge of a hard-won environmental recovery. But where will it flow from there?
BY JENNIFER REUT

90 Upstream D.C.

Upland from Washington, D.C.’s two rivers, the city is planning major investments in rain-soaking infrastructure.
BY BRADFORD MCKEE

106 FOUND IN TRANSLATION

In Seattle, MIG | SvR and Turenscape’s Hing Hay Park provides a place to gather—with a lively nod toward the Asian Pacific American experience.
BY BETSY ANDERSON, ASSOCIATE ASLA

THE BACK

124 IN MEMORIAM:
RICHARD HAAG, 1923–2018

His legacy to landscape architecture is a call to action for leadership.
BY THAIISA WAY, ASLA

134 BOOKS

Where Credit’s Due
A review of Designing San Francisco: Art, Land, and Urban Renewal in the City by the Bay, by Alison Isenberg.
BY JUSTIN PARSCHER, AFFILIATE ASLA

156 ADVERTISER INDEX

157 ADVERTISERS BY PRODUCT CATEGORY

172 BACKSTORY

A Greater Crater
A simple but dramatic stair on Iceland’s Saxhóll Crater by the Reykjavík firm Landslag has won the 2018 Rosa Barba Prize.
BY BRADFORD MCKEE